

No Place Like Home

The installations aim to provoke new ideas on how we look at, observe, discover, and consequently design, the public space in our cities; aiming to make a visitor feel 'at home' in a particular city. What is your opinion about this installation and what ideas does it suggest to you about public space?

If you would like to join the debate, jot down your thoughts and drop this card into the box in the gallery, or post it back to us. Many thanks for your input.

the installation was very pretty - thus suggesting that public space could ^{also} be pretty - if the right range of materials were to be chosen for it. I liked the combination of images of the natural world with ~~natural~~ more industrial materials.

Scott Brownrigg
77 Endell Street
London
WC2H 9DZ

www.scottbrownrigg.com
www.brighton.ac.uk

Date: 5/11/09 Name: Anonymous Email: _____ Occupation: _____

Your details will be recorded only for the purposes of our research and your comments may be included in the subsequent publication. If you would prefer not to be contacted by Scott Brownrigg Ltd or the University of Brighton in relation to your thoughts on No Place Like Home, please tick here Image © Dr Ivana Wingham